SIEMENS
Ingenuity for life

We have a weak relationship

A low level or influence

This is our FRIEND, he will never stand up to the Blocker

What does a good Opportunity Plan Look Like?
It has a Plan to manage all stakeholders in the decision. AND we flawlessly EXECUTE that plan

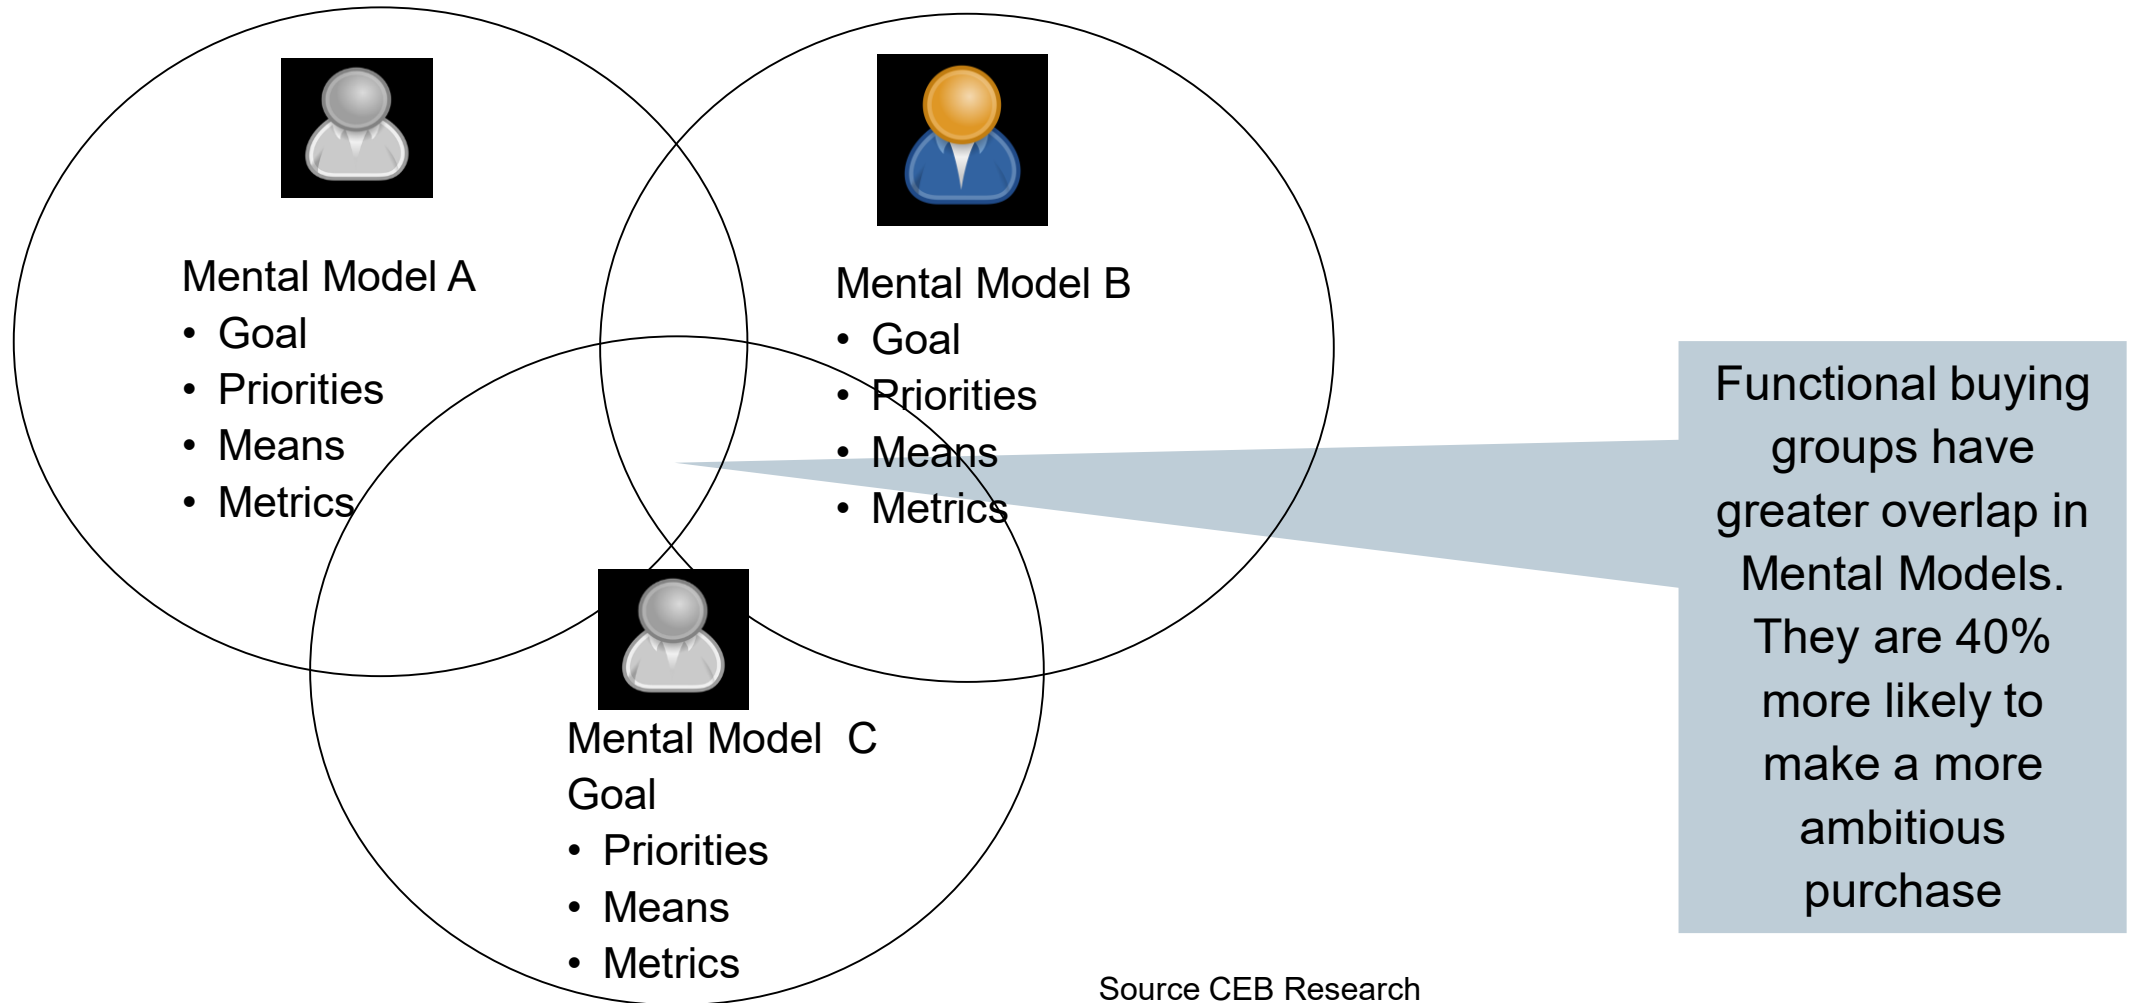

The screenshot shows a CRM interface with a list of stakeholders on the left. The list includes Peter Carrier (Chief Executive), Jennifer Lim (Chief Revenue Officer), and Rajiv Ghelkar (Chief Technology Officer). A callout for Alice Ko (VP Operations) is highlighted, showing a red status indicator and a note that says "AK Alice Ko VP Operations". Below the callout, there is a button that says "Break Back his opportunity".

Warmer
The Warmer is used to build credibility with the customer by describing a relevant business problem. Don't introduce the impact of the problem in this section.
Reframe
Use the Reframe to "Un-leash" the customer regarding the business problem. Introduce a new perspective that leads to an "Aha!" moment for the customer, but don't discuss the benefit that resolving the reframed problem provides.
Rational Drowning
Quantify the cost of inaction, or taking wrong action, to solve the business problem, to create a sense of urgency for the customer.
Emotional Impact
Personalize the problem for the customer, use stories, anecdotes, and metrics to explain how inaction, or wrong action, to solve the problem, causes unacceptable risk for the customer.
New Way Forward
Explain the best way that the customer can overcome the challenge you have just taught them about. Do not discuss our products or solutions here.
Our Solution
Describe our solutions with a link to the key insight we provided about the business problem.
